During this time, Carl Mays emerged as a formidable pitcher known for his control and resilience, yet his career was marred by a notorious incident involving a pitch that proved fatal.

The Incident That Changed Everything: The Fateful Pitch

The Background of the 1920 Game

On August 16, 1920, during a game between the New York Yankees and the Cleveland Indians, Carl Mays was pitching for the Yankees. The game was tense, with high stakes and intense rivalry. Tensions between players, teams, and fans were palpable, reflecting the aggressive nature of baseball at the time.

The Critical Pitch

In the seventh inning, with a runner on base, Mays delivered a fastball aimed inside. The batter, Ray Chapman of the Cleveland Indians, was known for his batting prowess and quick reflexes, but he was caught off guard by the inside pitch. The ball struck Chapman squarely in the head, leading to immediate and catastrophic injury.

Key details of this pitch include:

- The pitch was reportedly thrown at a high velocity, typical of Mays' aggressive pitching style.
- It was an inside fastball, a common tactic to challenge batters, but one that carried significant risk.
- The ball was reportedly a bit "high and tight," a term used to describe pitches thrown close to a batter's head.

The Aftermath and Consequences

Ray Chapman was rushed to the hospital but succumbed to his injuries hours later, making him the only Major League Baseball player to be killed by a pitched ball in the sport's history. The incident sent shockwaves through the baseball community and prompted widespread debate about player safety and pitching ethics.
